PREFACE

This volume of biographies, now in its first biennial edition, was originated by the editor in the hope that it would prove to be an authentic guide to the achievements of Notable Living Men and Women of the State of California, for use in the libraries and schools of the state.

We do not claim that the volume is perfect—it is doubtless true that errors will be found; undoubtedly there will be some inconsistencies; errors will be found in both inclusion and exclusion. When one takes into consideration the amount of time and effort involved in the preparation of such a work, especially the first edition, perhaps one will prove a little lenient toward the editor.

We do not claim that the volume is complete—repeated requests for data from certain individuals have failed to elicit any response.

We do claim, however, that each and every name appearing in this volume was nominated for that distinction by one, or more, whose name had already been accepted for inclusion by our Committee of Ten.

It is hoped that the pages of this edition will bear their own testimony to the sincere efforts of the editor to present a volume completely different to any biographical work ever attempted in the United States. We refer particularly to the name, title and degrees being at the top of the biography—where they belong. We have, also, in mind the paragraphing of each separate phase of an individual's career (headed in italics).

While every human effort will be spent to improve each succeeding edition, the fondest hopes of the editor will be realized if this volume serves in a small measure, the purpose for which it was intended, that of a quick and ready reference to the Notable Living Men and Women of the State of California.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR ADMISSION IN WHO'S WHO IN CALIFORNIA

The individuals whose names appear in Who's Who in California were nominated as being among the leaders in their profession, occupation or locality.

The standards of admission divide the eligibles into two classes: (1) those who are nominated owing to special prominence in various lines of endeavor, making them subjects of interest throughout the state; and (2) those whose official position—civil, naval, military, educational or religious, would arbitrarily result in their inclusion.

It is hoped that in due time this volume will present the biographies of every outstanding California Notable whose achievements make him, or her, a subject of interest. With this thought in mind the editor would appreciate the names, addresses and reason for inclusion of those who should be, but are not, in this volume so they may be in subsequent editions.

"No one has paid, or can pay, for inclusion in Who's Who in California."

Education: Private and public schools, and Oklahoma College for Women.

Degrees: A.B., U. of Redlands (Calif.).; M.A., Columbia U. (N.Y.); Scholarship from International Institute; Research Fellowship, Rockefeller Foundation.

Prof. Record: Won international recognition as in interpreter of the art, music and philosophy of the American Indian. Before audiences in concert halls, clubs, museums and educational institutions, she has created a deeper understanding of the spiritual and esthetic values in the Indians' contribution to American civilization. Through serious study and effort she has been an influential factor in conserving some of the fine traditions of the Indian. As a part of her pioneering work in this field, she has been interested in restoring to tribal centers, rare examples of ancient and modern Indian art through the media of museums and traveling exhibits. An outstanding memorial to her artistic ability and vision is the unique art lodge on the campus of Bacone Coll. (Okla.), where she founded the Department of Indian Art. She not only planned the details of the interior and exterior of this lodge, but was responsible for securing the funds to build and endow it. In her program of Indian lore, Ataloa uses only authentic music and legends. A variation of speech, song and dance are artistically combined. Adding to the interest and charm of her entertainment are the distinctive costumes of many tribes; these are exquisitely fahsioned in traditional design. She often explains the intricate processes used in making these ceremonial garments. Has been honored in being selected to represent Indians at International Conferences and on forum paltforms.
